Ramgarh Nature Camp spread in an area of over 10 bighas has a picture postcard setting of amongst the Sal forests near the Suswa - the only perennial river in the Doon Valley - has a unique location along the boundaries of the Rajaji National Park and offers unlimited access to the flora and fauna of the famed Shivalik Eco-System in the Rajaji National Park.

This Park was created in 1983 by amalgamation of three sanctuaries - Rajaji Sanctuary (estd 1948), Motichur Sanctuary (estd 1964) and Chilla Sanctuary (estd 1977) and named after the renowned statesman and freedom fighter Sri C Rajgopalachariya - the first and last Governor General of independent India popularly known as "Rajaji" - and spread over an area of 820.42 sq km in the three Districts of Dehra Dun,

Area

2 Acres of Camp Site with 820.42 Sq Km of National Park; Shivalik Foothills;

History

Established 80 years ago by Sir Edmond Gibson

Famous for

Bird watching, wildlife, van Gujjar, forest cover

Rajaji is thickly foliated predominantly by the Sal Forest and a number of other forest types which include the Western Gangetic Moist and Northern Dry Deciduous and Khair-Sissoo Forests. Low Alluvial Savannah Woodlands cover the drier southern margins of the Park, in contrast to the Shivalik Chir-Pine on the high reaches of the hills.

There are innumerable streams and brooks making it rich and diverse; offering ample opportunities to nature lovers to enjoy the captivating landscape and wildlife - "The nature looks better from proximity than the faraway".
